

Automated contract drafting solutions.

Drafting contracts is often inefficient, time-consuming and expensive for in-house legal teams. To enable businesses to tackle these frustrations and reduce risk, DWF has worked closely with Thomson Reuters to develop an automated contract drafting solution.

About dwf draft

The collaboration between DWF and Thomson Reuters enables businesses to benefit from an easy to procure legal service, designed to allow contracts to be drafted in less time to enable their lawyers to focus on higher value tasks.

Businesses benefit from:

- A collaborative problem solving approach led by our process and automation specialists
- The technical knowledge and practical experience of a leading legal business combined with the scale and resource of a global information and technology provider
- The ability to extend the solution to the wider commercial business, to deliver further efficiencies through self-service contracting
- DWF's unique contract risk calculator with associated workflows to automate and triage the review of third party contracts
- Solutions built on Thomson Reuters' market leading contract automation platform Contract Express
- Flexible solutions which allow you to pause or discontinue the process at any time
- Transparent fixed pricing from as little as £8,000 per year

Developing your dwf draft solution

Our approach requires minimal commitment and limited up-front investment. Each unique dwf draft solution is created using our collaborative five stage discovery process.

1. Identify

We discuss your top challenges, frustrations or ideas, and together identify a priority issue.

2. Scope

We design and run a complimentary workshop around your business priority, conduct analysis and produce a scope for a potential solution.

3. Analyse

We review the analysis together, discuss the scope and agree whether to progress the solution to a prototype.

4. Prototype

We work with you to produce a low-cost prototype of the solution within four weeks to use and test within your business.

5. Proposal

If the prototype is deemed to be successful, we work together to produce a comprehensive proposal and business case for the development of a full fixed-price solution.
